Goulottes

Description

The goulottes are icy ribbon that run sharp between the rock walls of the most beautiful mountains of the Alps.

The ascent of a goulotte is a complete alpine experience, made of approach through glaciers, climbing on ice and snow and sometime with stretches of mix terrains to handle with ice axes. This kind of ascent requires a minimum of experience on the terrains you will deal with but, guided by an Alpine Guide, you'll be able to soak in this beautiful nuance of modern alpinism, experiencing the mountain at 360°!

Possibilities are various. Mountainous massifs like the Mount Blanc are rich of goulottes of any kind, beginning from the short and easy ones you can hike in a day to the longest and more complex ones, suitable for the most expert alpinist.

Seek advice from your Alpine Guide on the best goulotte to suit your requirements.
