Mont Blanc 4810 m

Description

The Monte Bianco with its 4810 mts is the highest top of the Alps and western Europe. With the first ascent in 1786 the alpinism was officially born and now, after more than two centuries, the Mount Blanc top attracts alpinists from all over the world.

The regular three ascents are: the one starting from the Refuge du Gouter, the one starting from Rifugio Gonella and the one starting from Refuge du Cosmiques.

All of them are stunning, different in length, landscape and technicity. Depending on your capacities we'll suggest the best ascent for you to fully enjoy the highest Alps mountain top where the game of alpinism started

Specific equipment:

Climbing harness, ice axe and crampons. In case of necessity might be handed by the organization.
