Dry Tooling Course

Description

Dry tooling is the fascinating discipline that puts together rock climbing and ice falls ascent, or better said, ascent of rock bits to reach ice casting, otherwise unreachable.

Ice axes and crampons, used at their best on the rock, to take advantage of cracks, small handholes in a strength and balance game until reaching and hooking fabulous ice lines. During the two days of this Dry Tooling course you'll learn to improve your sensibility on crampons and ice axes to be able to "feel" the grasps and make the most of each small roughness in the rock. You will learn to use ice axes wringing in cracks and how to rest in the most absurd positions and in the most unconceivable spots and eventually, how to understand the real hold of the structures we'll hang ourselves to.

In few words: we will pass on our passion for drytooling with particular focus on technique and security.
